Special Session

Special Session on Spectroscopic Characterization of Materials

Organizer: Prof. Alfred A. Christy, Department of Science,
University of Agder, Kristiansand, Norway

Characterization of materials is an important aspect of material science. Their characterization will help us to learn and find materials needed for different applications. There are different scientific techniques available for the characterization of materials and the use of Spectroscopic techniques will be discussed in a special session at the 13th ICAMR.

Topics such as infrared, micro-FTIR, Raman and Micro Raman, Near Infrared, UV, femtosecond spectroscopy, Auger electron spectroscopy (AES), scanning ion microscopy (SIM) etc. Contributions, where spectroscopy is used as the analytical technique in the characterization of materials, are welcome.

Note: Please send the information of Special Session with the paper number assigned at submission to the following email address : icamr@sciei.org.
